

Can We Help You?

There are some men living in the 20th century who are still using 19th century methods. They do not realize that the day for long time credit and consequent high prices is past.

With the good crops that this district now produces and the resultant prosperity, farmers are in a position to discount prices. This should please everybody—no bad bills to pay—no long faces. The same deal to everybody.

Shipment of Grain.

The Crossfield District has not been backward in the grain business recently. While there is a large amount of vacant land around and railway depots only nine miles away, both north and south, yet we find that the amount of grain shipped from Crossfield Station since the beginning of last September amounts to no less than 120,000 bushels. This is very gratifying and judging from present indications next year shipping returns will show a very considerable advance over even the above figures.

Happily Married.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. Thos. Pole, of Airdrie, on Wednesday, January 13th at 7 p. m. when his daughter Ester was united in marriage to Mr. A. A. Farr of this place.

The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the room to the strains of the wedding march. She was handsomely gowned in silk and carried a beautiful bouquet of roses and carnations.

The ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreens, and in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties both of whom were unaccompanied.

After the ceremony the guests partook of a bounteous repast. The bride was the recipient of a number of costly presents. The bridal couple took the 11 p. m. train for Banff where the honeymoon was spent. Heartiest congratulations and best wishes are extended to bride and groom.

Rev. Mr. Hodgins was the officiating clergyman.

Miss Ester will be missed in the post office where for the past two years she has acted as assistant to the postmaster, Mr. Hatt, and while on duty she has filled to the satisfaction of the entire community.

Mr. and Mrs. Schofield also sang most effectively and Bert Thomas gave a recitation which was well received. All present report spending a most enjoyable evening.

More New Lodges

Rev. J. E. Brown, of New York, Good Templar organizer and lecturer paid a visit to Crossfield on Thursday. He is anxious to see a lodge of the International Order of Good Templars formed here. It is hoped to form a Grand Lodge of Alberta as soon as sufficient lodges are formed in the province. At present this is under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Alberta. Men and women alike are eligible for membership in the I. O. G. T. Mr. Brown hopes to hold a meeting here shortly in the interests of the movement. Crossfield bids fair to be well represented among the lodges. Already the Oddfellows, Canadian Order of Foresters and Orange Lodges are in full working order. The Modern Workmen of America have applied for a charter and expect to have their initiation next month. Now the I. O. G. T. appears upon the scene. Whose next? Let 'em all come!

The Persian Revolutionists.
The revolutionary party in Persia is circulating on posters and in larger towns a picture of the great ruler "Persian justice," which shows three bandits hanging by their necks from the city gate of Isfahan. The most usual, are shown suspended from an opening in the wall, the ropes binding their legs being fastened to a pillar, next to which a military guard stands at "attention." "For hours," runs the legend under the picture, "these wretches, the robber Ago and his companions, hung, in their badly wounded condition, before death relieved their agony." Thousands of people of all ages and classes looked on with interest at these victims of "Persian justice."

PRIMITIVE FOOTBALL

With Goals Meant Entire Part Whole Parishes Would Take Part In Game.

It is interesting to read descriptions of the game of football as it is played in the olden times. In Carew's day, two, three or more parishes would challenge two or three other parishes. The goal was houses or villages two or three miles apart, and the side that reached the goal with the ball, whether by brute force or strategy, won the game. Brawling players would inflict the wounding blows, by crying, "Ware ast!" "Ware west!" etc. The players, or "burgers," as they were called, ran over hills, dales, hedges, ditches, yaws, and through bushes, briars, dikes, plashes and rivers whatsoever, so as you shall sometimes see 20 or 30 lads tugging together in the water, scrambling and scratching for the ball.

Sometimes a whole town was used as a field and the party with the ball would sneak around corners and alleys in order to lose their opponents and gain the goal. One writer says he was "not a little amused to see, upon entering Ledington, all the inhabitants during the play, the burglers, front windows by placing hurdles before them and some by nailing laths. At Twickenham, Busby and I saw an opportunity of seeing the whole custom. About 12 o'clock the ball is turned loose by the players, who are observed some persons of respectability following the ball. The game lasts four hours, when the parties retire to the public houses."

Football has had as turbulent and warlike a history as the game itself. As far back as 1314 it was expressly forbidden by Edward II. and in 1380 another statute was passed by Richard II., outlawing the sport. This statute was re-enacted at various intervals by successive monarchs, and twice during the reign of Elizabeth proclamation was made that no "football" should be played or suffered within the city of London and the liberties thereof, upon pain of imprisonment.

A Versatile Sculptor.
Mr. George J. Frampton, the well-known sculptor, upon whom the King has bestowed a knighthood, is one of the most versatile men in the world of art. Not only are there statues from his chisel of the late Queen in places as far apart as Calcutta and Winnipeg, but all over England many specimens of his handiwork are to be found, including figures and statues of the highest Cathedral and on the beautiful spire of the University Church of Oxford. There are, of course, very many examples of Mr. Frampton's work scattered about the metropolis. The terra cotta decoration on the Cathedral and in his; so is the sculpture on the exterior of Lloyd's. Nothing if not versatile, the artist has done much fine work in silver, and enamel, besides the design of the coronation and other medals.

The Shadow.
Being blessed by a public meeting of Athenians, the Greek orator Demosthenes quitted them by announcing that he had a short story to tell. "A certain youth," he said, "hired an ass in summer time to go from here to Messara. About noon, when the day was very hot, and both he that hired the ass and the owner were desirous of shade, he to the shade of the ass, and they each thrust the other away. The owner argued that he had hired the ass, and he to the shade of the ass, and he replied that, since he had hired the ass, all that belonged to the ass was his. Demosthenes turned as if to go away, but the mob called him back and begged him to proceed. He began with this reply: "The ass comes to pass that you are desirous of hearing a story of the shadow of an ass and refuse to give ear to matters of greater moment?" The orator then made his speech, but he never told how the question was decided.

Spinning the Eggshell.
Molten the rim of a breakfast plate—not merely the outer edge, but all the raised portion. Place the half of an empty eggshell on the wet surface, the shell being broken evenly, so as to form a little cup. Now, if you hold the plate up and tip it slightly, the egg may be made to not merely slide, but spin along the rim, and by continuously altering the inclination of the plate you can cause the shell to spin all the way round, but it will not spin rapidly, like a top, but as it goes round the plate it also revolves slowly about its own axis in the same direction. Now, this, you know, is just what the earth does in traveling around the sun, so that you have an easy and peckly lesson in astronomy at the breakfast table.

The Square Deal.
A stout and opulent man dwelling in a suburban town had borne the expense of the annual Sunday school picnic, and the superintendent of the school, out of gratitude, asked the benefactor to address the children. The philanthropist was not much of a speaker, but he was a master hand at poker. When he found himself gazing into the expectant faces of 100 children his embarrassment almost overcame him, but he managed to stammer out: "My dear children, I want to impress upon you is that—er—er—it is very good to be good. That—er—er—a man who deals from the bottom of the pack is generally buried at the public expense."

THE STORAGE WAREHOUSE.

It Sheds Some Side Lights Upon Life and Morals.

For a few dazzling side lights upon life and morals apply to the storage warehouse. You can find almost anywhere there from ballyraggers to blocks of ice cream and from Teddy bears to sundries, but you won't be amazed at what the institution has most recently divulged. Here you have the story:

Mrs. Q. repaired to the storage warehouse to extract her soup spoons, though it may have been aunts or uncles or popcorn or guinea pigs. At any rate, her property declined to come out. It had been tucked in by Mr. Q. Only Mr. Q. might tempt it forth. Mrs. Q. protested. She wanted her catnip or theology or safety razor, or whatever it was, and made representations with great emphasis. She moved upon the management. She stormed and wept. After long wrangling the warehouse decided it would yield up the college ice—was it the piano?—if Mrs. Q. would swear she was still married to Mr. Q. and would send him a written statement (he was in Quebec, and I lost track of him owing to bewilderment produced by merely thinking of strange warehouse and make her return the statement, counter-signed, to the management. This, then, is how Mrs. Q. secured possession of her golf links or maybe book or sugar tooth. Well, say it was sugar tooth, though golf links would be likelier.

Presumably the explanation, the warehouse remarked: "Have to be careful, you know—divorces, separations, affidavits, you know. Minute such things start in, it's no more business of our place. Game is for each to snatch out everything first. Becomes embarrassing!"

MIXED THE SIGNS.

Saratoga and the Sandwich Men in Edinburgh.

To advertise Saratoga's performance in Edinburgh eight sandwich men were sent out, each of whom bore in front and behind him one letter of the great musty name. They started all right, but after a time removed the boards from their shoulders to have a rest.

On resuming their labors each man shouldered the board nearest him and fell in behind the man who had formerly carried the board nearest him. When the leader, who bore the initial "S," turned around to see if his men were ready, what he saw was "Saratoga." He knew, of course, that something was wrong, but how to right it was more than he could tell.

After changing a man here and there he got stuck in a mess. But still it didn't seem correct. By this time the poor fellow was in a terrible state. If any of his employers' people were to see the outlook and could see them, their day's wage would be stopped! He tried again and yet again, but it was no use.

At a moment later a man bearing the letter "S" before and behind was seen running toward the music hall to poster down the boards. And along the right side of Princeton street there walked toward the appointed rendezvous at the Mount Street music hall, the strange device "A. E." while opposite them there paced along the left side gutter four others, who, if to advertise the music hall, had succeeded well, for every one who passed looked on in wondering amazement as to what "Rats" meant.—Edinburgh Dispatch.

Too Much For The Ferret.

An old truck rabbit is not to be lightly tackled by waded, stout or even ferret. On the sandy floor of a small public house a ferret of long experience was matched with an old lop eared buck, the property of the landlord. The ferret made straight for the rabbit's throat, but the latter was in the act of turning round to reach him and, leaping clean over the ferret's head, let out with those powerful teeth a blow which sent the ferret hurled the ferret bodily against the wainscot. Twice the ferret returned to the attack, and twice he missed his grip and went hurtling through the air. The third repulse was enough for him. He knew he was beaten and could not be persuaded to stand up for a fourth round.

Her Accomplishment.

In the Bohemian set of Chicago two of the popular members are a well known writer and his wife, who has also written several books. They have a daughter about four years old. Recently the little girl was visiting at the home of a friend and her small playmate asked, "Can your mamma sew?"

The daughter of the literary pair evidently was a bit chagrined. She could not remember that she ever had seen her mamma sew. She is a truthful child and would not claim any advantage she was not sure of, yet she felt mamma's honor was at stake.

"I don't know if mamma can sew," she replied dubiously, "but she can make a cigarette."

Jefferson's Joke.

Joseph Jefferson, America's great actor, who died a couple of years ago, was the author of a joke which had its scene in Montreal. It is, moreover, the last scene of all in the drama set for him in the Masterpiece Theatre. Mr. Jefferson was in the city during the carnival of the previous winter (1885-86). On the right Mr. Jefferson saw a building which, he was told, was a Methodist church; and on the left the Roman Catholic Cathedral. And I suppose, he remarked, "There is a coolness between them." Mr. Jefferson was interested in Montreal's art collections. The canvases of Goud in St. George Drummond's gallery greatly pleased him.

Hunter and Wolves.

Thomas Garvin of Hull recently had a hair-raising experience with wolves near Blackston, Que. Being pursued by a pack of eight wolves and finding escape by flight impossible, he turned and faced them. Before they could close in on him he shot the two leaders and the others became frightened and escaped into the bush.

Wolves are reported to be unusually numerous and ferocious for this season of the year.

A Boon for the Billows.—The liver is a very sensitive organ and easily deranged. An indication of its trouble is undue secretion of bile and the acid liquid flows into the stomach and causes indigestion and distressing acidities, and many are prone to it. In this condition a man finds the best relief in the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which are warranted to speedily correct the disorder. There is no better medicine for the entire list of preparations.

He Was Born Too Soon.

A middle-aged gentleman was asked the other day if he liked the liver wing of a chicken.
"I hardly know," he said, "I have so seldom eaten them. When I was a boy they fell to my father's share, and now that I am a father my children eat them."—Queen.

Twitching of the Nerves

SICK TWENTY-ONE YEARS—A HUNDRED REMEDIES TRIED IN VAIN—CURED WITH

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food

Tapping of the fingers, restlessness, sleeplessness, inability to control nerves.

What a story of exhausted nerves is told by these symptoms. Nervous prostration and paralysis are not far away unless restorative treatment is used.

The writer of this letter was fortunate enough to learn about Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food and tells her experience for the benefit of other sufferers from diseases of the nerves.

Mrs. E. J. Vanderburgh, of Eastern Weiland & Co., St. Catharines, writes:—

"I tried a hundred remedies in vain and reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I decided to try it. After having used half a dozen boxes of this preparation my little trouble had entirely vanished and I was enjoying better health than I had since girlhood. I was now in the middle of life and in perfect health. I would not take words today and go back to my former state."

Mr. Wm. Branton, Strathroy, Ont., writes:—"My nervous system was all unstrung. I could not sleep, had no appetite, my digestion was poor and my nerves were twitched."

Boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food completely restored my health."
Dr. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on every box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents at all drug stores, or Edman Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Gruesome Auction.

Kits and auction most at sea are sold regularly at auction at the Albert Docks in London. The sale provides many a pleasant sight, and the lots are contained in the regular sailor's sea chest, all marked with the name of the ship from which they come. One sea chest which came up for auction recently was that of an English sailor who had been eaten by cannibals. It is not unusual for those who have lost friends or relatives to be sold at auction, and there are times when the loss of such a loss comes through the recognition of familiar objects.

Always Ready Pill.—To those of regular habit medicine is of little concern, but the great majority of men are not of regular habit. The worry and anxiety of business prevent it, and out of the irregularity of life comes dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles, a protest. The run-down system demands a corrective and there is none better than Parmentier's Vegetable Pills. They are simple in their composition and can be taken by the most delicately constituted.

PARIS CABBIERS.

The War of Words That Comes When They Block Each Other.

There is no more entertaining way to spend an idle hour in Paris than to get into a taxicab and instruct the driver to go along some street where you will be reasonably sure to get into a jam or to bump against another cab. The charm of the experience is, of course, enhanced by your ignorance of what the cabbies say.

Should your driver merely graze the wheels of another cab he will turn on his seat and yell maliciously at the other driver, who in turn will shout back an assortment of vowels. But the best is a quarrel between two cabbies obstructing each other's way.

The conversation translated into nearly literally as is safe, goes in this wise:

"Sacred name! Why do you?"

"Holly blue! I do not!"

"Stomach on the ground! You have the face of an ox!"

"Blue stomach! Are you in chains?"

"A bas! Name of a dog!"

"Mae Die! Name of a pig!"

"Wow (or words to that effect)!
Name of a name!"

"A thousand deaths! Name of a name of a name!"

Now you begin to expect some things. While you have not fully understood, you are satisfied that nothing but pistols and knives will wipe out the insults.

Unfortunately about this time the jam is outgrown and you are allowed to drive away, but the other driver yells after you:

"Alas! You are a little piece of brown soap!"

It seems that this expression is the "fighting name" in Paris. Were it not that your cabbie owes a duty to you and must convey you to your destination you know by his facial expression that he would climb down and get that other cabbie and maul up the city with him.

He contents himself with turning about and making a face in the direction of his enemy and of going through the motion of spitting at him.

Then he says "Yooop!" to the horse, and the war is over.

The banana.

The banana is said to have thirty-four times the nutritive value of the potato and twenty-five times that of bread. In the West Indies the natives cut the fruit into strips called "paves," dry these in the sun and grind them into flour, out of which many excellent dishes are made. No cheaper food grows in the tropics.
The plant begins bearing fourteen months after being planted. It requires no cultivation and produces harvests uninterruptedly for eleven years. A few feet of ground nourishes a plant, and the space of a doorway will grow plants enough to maintain a large family.

Dog Must Not Work.

Some misguided person returning from a continental holiday has wondered why dogs are not used in England as beasts of burden. The reason why is nothing less simple than a statute. As long ago as 1859, an act, passed making it a punishable offence for any person within the metropolitan area to "use any dog for the purpose of drawing or helping to draw any cart, carriage, truck or barrow." Fifteen years later, in 1874, an act, passed in "the more effectual prevention of cruelty to animals," extended the prohibition to all parts of the kingdom.

PLAYING HAVOC WITH PATENT MEDICINES

An Old-fashioned, Home-Made Mixture which Cures Kidney and Liver Troubles

A prominent local druggist states that since the celebrated prescription of a distinguished specialist has become more or less known it is interfering with the sale of secret medicines. The prescription, which first appeared in a leading health journal, is reproduced here, just exactly as originally written: Fluid Extract Cascara, ½ oz.; Fluid Extract Carmania Compound, 1 oz.;
Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, 6 oz.
Directions: One teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Any good druggist can dispense this, or, even better, a person can buy the items separately and mix them at home by shaking them well together in a bottle. It is stated that the ingredients being vegetable, are harmless and simple. It has a gentle and natural action, and gradually tones up the eliminative tissues, leaving the kidneys in a perfectly healthy condition.

A merchant well known in public affairs states that this recipe cured his rheumatism. Save the prescription.

Troubles of an Ambitious Pear

"Oh, how I wish,
I were a fish!"
Exclaimed the pear,
With moody stare.

He had his wish;
And in a dish
He soon was served,
As he deserved.

There are still other drawing lessons to be given by the Ambitious Pear—with drawings as simple as those which the little boys and girls already have copied. Watch for them.

A Great Hunger.

Doctor—Well, my lad, I think you're well enough to have solid food now. How would chicken do—nice stuffed chicken, eh? And what would you like it stuffed with?

"Lad (hungry)—Just have it stuffed with another chicken, doctor."

Toodles' Babies

IT ALL happened because Fuzzy had lost his ball. Fuzzy was our little Alreidae terrier, you know, and the liveliest doggie ever seen. And the ball Fuzzy lost was the one he would take to the summit of the hill, which began right in front of our house, and there start it rolling. Down the slope would go the ball, and after it Fuzzy. The terrier would try his best to catch the ball in his mouth, but as it usually traveled much faster than Fuzzy he rarely caught up to it until the bottom of the hill was reached.

When Fuzzy mistook his ball somewhere he was a sorry little doggie, indeed. He whined and fussed all day long, until each of us vowed we'd buy him another ball without delay. But carried one puppy after another. After he'd laid them down carefully, he passed a while. Then he started to roll one of them down the hill. "Course, the puppy didn't like this one bit. But Fuzzy was determined he'd have some sort of a ball. All the way down the hill rolled the puppy, whining and clawing the air. Fuzzy was having great fun, when, all of a sudden, back bounded Toodles to her babies! Was she angry? I should say so! Toodles was hopping mad—and who can blame her? The way she scolded Fuzzy was too amusing for anything.

"First of all," said Toodles, accusingly, "there was no bone, and you knew it! And then you're no more sense than to treat my babies in this somehow we'd forget, and that was how Fuzzy came to do the very funny thing with Toodles' babies.

Toodles, the English setter, was quite friendly with Fuzzy. And so when Fuzzy probably whispered to Toodles that there was a nice bone hidden in the yard, I suppose Toodles thought it no harm to leave her three babies for a short time in order to look for that bone. And I've no doubt she thanked Fuzzy heartily, in dog language, for the kind information. Anyway, Toodles was coaxed away from her children for a sufficient space of time to enable Fuzzy to accomplish his purpose. And what do you think this terrier's escape plan was? You'd never guess. Right to the top of the hill Fuzzy way! What if you have no balls? That's no reason why you should make balls out of puppies!

If Fuzzy was as much ashamed as he appeared to be, he must have felt miserable, indeed. But we had a little sympathy for him, too, and the very next time we passed a store we purchased a ball for him, so that he need no longer attempt rolling puppies down a hill.

A Figure Which Will Raise Itself

SHAPED a small figure of itself, by decking it with clothes by gumming it silk flow or other light stuff, and plus on the back of it half a marble or half a wooden bullet, fastened by its flat side. However you may know, no longer attempt rolling puppies down a hill.

Souvenirs From Banana Skins

WHEN Nan and Dan gave their Halloween party, you remember what pretty souvenirs, made from nutshells, they presented to their guests.

So popular did these gifts prove that Christmas Eve they decided to devise other souvenirs just as nice. After thinking over the matter, he decided to experiment with fruits. How the wonderful novelty by constructed from banana skins. Nothing was used save the peels of a few matinalas and a little cardboard.

You can easily make every one of the souvenirs pictured, while there are ever so many more attractive novelties you will readily think of. Why not have fruit souvenirs for YOUR party?

In the Drawer.

His mother tucked eight-year-old John away in the top berth of the sleeping car. Hearing him stir in the middle of the night, she softly called: "John, do you know where you are?" "Of course, I do," he returned. "I'm in the top drawer."

Airy Homes

ONCE a real estate agent, in going over the list of seashore houses with a prospective renter, pointed out the cottages and their locations, and described them as "airy," "small" and "stuffy." Needless to say, those designated as "stuffy" were avoided.

Why should any house be stuffy? Every one knows what the term means, although in words it is indescribable; yet some houses are unmistakably so, and once having acquired the stigma, it takes refurbishing and a general renovating to remove it. Careful study of the matter has proved that it is entirely owing to the airing of the beds, improperly aired rooms, and rooms where all the clothes of the sleeping families have not regularly been removed are always "stuffy"; and it takes but a short time for it to impregnate the whole house. Each separate blanket and sheet should be taken off, shaken and laid spread out on the chair; the window should be open, and the place unoccupied for a full hour. This done, the house remains fresh, clean and healthful. It is a peculiar fact, but nevertheless true, that many housekeepers—good ones, too—neglect these details, while, really, such things should be included in the first lessons for keeping a house.

The same rule applies to personal belongings. Many women, I, speaking of another, will say: "She is careless; when she takes off her dress she never hangs it in the closet." Nor should she; that is not carelessness; it is the essence of good care. All wearing apparel needs fresh, cool air before being placed among other garments; and the woman who takes off her things—hat, veil, coat or skirt—when she has come into the house and immediately puts them away never has fresh things, no matter how many daily baths she may take.

How to Make an Ice Yacht

"SAY, fellows, Billy has been a dandy captain all the year, and now that Christmas is 'most here I think all us 'Bloody Robbers' ought to be thinking of something to give him as a token of esteem," "according to Bill Kane."

One glance at the enthusiastic faces in the circle revealed the fact that every member of the gallant band of

and there he made fast with two buckles.

When this much of the work had been deftly accomplished, under the captain's direction, a triangular block was placed between BB at O, through which the masts were to go. Then the planks, O, were attached to the frame with screws, and the shoe-blocks, P F, each twenty-four inches long and three inches square, were bolted to the

CAPTAIN BIGGS' DIAGRAMS

"Robbers" was of the same mind as Shorty. However, they were puzzled to know just what Billy would appreciate most.

For a time silence reigned in the little boatshop which Shorty's father, being rich, had bought for the accommodation of Shorty's dory, canoe, ice yacht and all manner of fishing tackle. Here all the "Robbers" were gathered, with the exception of Billy, who had to go upon an errand to Zigler's grocery store.

All of a sudden Skinny scrambled down from his perch on the ice yacht, "fellows," said he, with a smile of triumph, "I've got it!"

"Hold fast! Don't let it 'scap! Look out it don't overtop your hull" came in a chorus from the rest. Skinny, not at all disturbed, continued: "You know how pleased Billy was with Shorty's ice yacht. Called it a crackerjack, jim-dandy, and was tickled 'most to death when he got a ride. Well, that's just what we ought to give him. It won't be so very hard to build. We can buy the wood and set to work, a couple of us at a time, to build the yacht in the loft right above us, where Shorty has his tools. Only we must always have some one on the lookout, so's Billy won't catch us."

It was settled in a moment. Every "Robber" scurried home to lap his "bank," and that very afternoon Shorty headed a deputation of five others to go to Skinner's lumber yard and there purchase what they wanted. Captain Biggs, who owned the boatshop next to Shorty's, told them exactly what to get, and promised to help them build the yacht.

START BUILDING

The next day was Saturday, and Joe Stanton was instructed to coax Billy into a skating trip away up the creek to Berger's mill.

Then, under the personal instruction of Captain Biggs, the loft of Shorty's boatshop became the busiest sort of a workshop. First, the captain drew a rough sketch of the yacht, as seen in Figure 1, showing the framework of the yacht. A, he said, was to be six feet long, two inches thick; B, B each three feet long—all to be made of clear spruce timber. In putting together, the edges were to be beveled with a plane, and the four corners of each piece long steel wire spikes were to be

The bowprit, B, extending six feet beyond A, was to be made from spruce two and a half by four inches, tapered at the ends. To be laid over A, and a spike, driven through the ends, was to be received into a hole made in C. At the end of the bowprit a stilt was having three eyes was to be driven on. The top eye was to receive the forestay and the side ones the bobstay cables, which were to run to the corners of the boat timbers A and B. The mast, six to eight inches in diameter, to receive the mast, right under this large hole, in the bowprit, a smaller hole was made to receive a three-quarter inch iron pin protruding six inches from the bottom of the mast.

Captain Biggs now produced from somewhere a pair of steel-line shoes,

THE YACHT COMPLETE

shown in Figure 2-A, a rudder (Figure 2-B), and a tiller (Figure 2-C). These I had made at the blacksmith shop," said he, enjoying the surprise of the boys, "as they are no contribution to Captain Billy's yacht."

Later a mast was put in place, twelve feet high and four inches in diameter, slightly tapering feet long, and the boom was attached to the mast, strengthened with ribs and edged all about with a piece of steel used for sails. The mainmast measured eight feet in the mast, five feet on the part down on the boom, and the leach was thirteen feet in length. The jib (the smaller sail) was ten feet on the forestay, six feet at the foot and eight feet on the leach. In rigging, the same plan was followed as that employed in yacht making use of halyards and buckles, as shown in the drawings of the completed yacht.

Captain Biggs made interesting drawings (Figure 4 and Figure 5, A, B, in which he showed how the boat could be built to run on ice and also float on water. In rigging, the same plan was followed as that employed in yacht making use of halyards and buckles, as shown in the drawings of the completed yacht.

And Billy was surprised and grateful as you can imagine.

work of an instant. And the next morning Toby was lying on the covers, for all the world like a sick little boy.

Poor Grandma really thought Toby WAS a sick little boy when she entered the room. And grandma was so very, very unkind that she actually gave the medicine to Toby instead of Tony! Of course, doggy made all sorts of funny sounds, and Tony, after he did THAT, too, and grandma never suspected.

"Toby, now, my boy will feel better, now," said grandma, soothingly, as she gently patted the covers.

And decided that Toby nothing but burred his face in the bedclothes and snicker and snicker and snicker. He was a sick little boy, and he was done. He thought it a splendid joke that the innocent doggy should have had to take the bad-tasting medicine.

Harness ! Harness !

We Are The People!

We now have the largest and BEST ASSORTED HARNESSTOCK of any store between Calgary and Edmonton. We have always headed the list in harness. The older our business gets the more the people flock to our store. The reason for this is that the people can buy with confidence from us. They know from experience that the Goods are exactly what we represent them to be. As for Prices—we are on the ground floor. As stated in our previous advt. we are giving a 10 per cent. discount on Our Own Make Harness.

We also have a Large Stock of Factory Harness at prices that the T. Eaton Co. can't compete with. As for Our Own Make Harness, customers are daily asking for another set just as good as the last two or three sets they bought from us. Our Own Make Harness are selling nearly as fast as we can manufacture them. Why? Because they are made of the heaviest and best Union oak leather on the market and the best of workmanship. Call and inspect our stock and prices.

We also have a few blankets and robes left which you can buy at your own price.
